

Cell phone use aboard aircraft sounds great. It would be convenient, but would also cause many passengers to lose their cool. If you have a couple people using their phones at the same time, they each will try to talk over the other, causing the entire aircraft to be disturbed. It will also put added pressure and undue stress on flight attendants who will receive complaints from other passengers who may want to use the flight to catch up on much needed sleep. It still has not been concluded that cell phones do not interfere with aircraft radio transmissions or that terrorists could use cell phones to try and take control of an aircraft. Please don't put the pressure on flight crews to keep this in check. Passengers can be rude and don't care who they are disturbing when talking.
